Jury convicts priest, teacher of most counts in abuse case

A jury yesterday convicted Catholic priest Rev. Charles Engelhardt and former parochial school teacher Bernard Shero of nearly all charges involving the repeated sexual abuse of a 10-year-old altar boy at St. Jerome Parish in Northeast Philadelphia between 1998 and 2000.

"This is an important day for all institutional abuse victims," District Attorney Seth Williams said. "It is not an easy thing to overcome decades of cover-up and a culture of silence. This verdict will help [end] the blind eye and the deaf ear with which so many victims of abuse have been received."

The decision came after nearly three full days of deliberations. Central to the trial was the credibility of the victim — now 24 — who has struggled with heroin addiction since he was a teen and at times gave varying accounts of the abuse details.

"Engelhardt and Shero tried to avoid justice by claiming the victim was not credible," said David Clohessy, director of the Survivors Network of Those Abused by Priests. "We are glad their hurtful and malicious legal tactic did not work."

Defense lawyers pointed to a pending civil suit the victim brought against the archdiocese as a possible motive for what they said were outrageous allegations, but prosecutors

► The abuse took place at St. Jerome Parish in Northeast Philadelphia from 1998 to 2000.

A long line of convictions

The case faced a hurdle when Edward Avery, another former St. Jerome Parish priest who last year pleaded guilty to sexually assaulting the same victim, testified earlier this month that he never abused the child and only took the plea because he feared a trial would result in a longer sentence.

In what legal observers called a landmark conviction,

Monsignor William Lynn was last year found guilty of child endangerment for exposing the victim to Avery, a known pedophile. The monsignor allowed Avery's transfer to Saint Jerome even though the priest already had admitted to abusing a boy in the past.

Avery began abusing the boy after fellow priest Engelhardt described to him a sexual encounter he'd had with the victim, according to testimony.

"Not only did he have the strength to report his abuse, he had the tenacity to look his abusers in the eye and testify in front of complete strangers about the horrific details of his attacks," Williams said.

Both men were taken into custody and will be sentenced on March 18. Engelhardt faces a maximum sentence of 37 years, while Shero could receive up to 57 years.

PHILADELPHIA. The District Attorney's Office yesterday charged a man who allegedly pulled a gun on a SEPTA bus driver for missing his stop.

Investigators said 20-year-old Walter Thompson threatened a Route 24 bus driver with a firearm last Thursday after the driver failed to break at Thompson's desired drop-off point. Thompson then allegedly jumped off the bus and fled.

Thompson was arrested Tuesday night and charged with assault, harassment, terroristic threats and weapons offenses.

He was arraigned yesterday and is currently jailed in lieu of $150,000 bail. Thompson is next due in court for a preliminary hearing on Feb. 14.

Corbett presents privatization plan for liquor

PITTSBURGH. Gov. Tom Corbett yesterday announced a proposal to privatize the state liquor system, with $1 billion in proceeds going toward a block grant for schools.

"Pennsylvania and Utah are the only two states in the country who have fully state-controlled liquor systems," he said. "Our plan sells both the wholesale and retail arms of the state-run liquor business."

The plan would double the number of wine and spirits stores in the state and allow more retailers, such as supermarkets, pharmacies and convenience stores, to sell beer and wine.

It would also toughen fines for selling spirits to minors and visibly intoxicated people. The additional monies would go toward stepped-up enforcement efforts by the state police and the Bureau of Liquor Control Enforcement. ● METRO/AW

Pa.'s homicide rate among blacks is nation's second highest Pennsylvania's black homicide victimization rate is the second highest in the country, according to analysis of unpublished FBI data released yesterday by the Violence Policy Center.

"Across the nation, this is a long-ignored public health crisis that is devastating black teens and adults, their families and the communities where they live," said study co-author Josh Sugarmann.

Pennsylvania's homicide rate among black victims in 2010 — the most recent year for which data is available — was more than six times the overall U.S. homicide rate.

The study revealed that, even nationwide, homicides disproportionately affect African-Americans. Only 13 percent of the country's 2010 population was black, yet blacks accounted for a staggering 49 percent of homicide victims.

"It's more than a national public health crisis," said Chad Dion-Lassiter, president of Black Men at Penn. "It should have been framed that way 20 years ago. It's a disease, and the ailment has to be cured. The thing that's ailing a lot of black males is a failed economy, a sense of hopelessness, a sense of maleism and a sense of despair."

Dion-Lassiter said there needs to be a shift in the way violent crime is addressed to account for the role of economics, in addition to race. "What drives it is economic deprivation and moral erosion," he said. "And I think when you look at those and the way they intersect, it becomes combustible — along with the readily available guns." ● METRO/AW

Giffords makes emotional plea over gun control

WASHINGTON. Former Congresswoman Gabby Giffords, grievously wounded in a 2011 mass shooting, made an emotional plea yesterday for Congress to take action to curb U.S. gun violence, but a National Rifle Association executive said new gun laws "have failed in the past and they'll fail again."

WASHINGTON. John Brennan, President Barack Obama's nominee to head the CIA, had detailed, contemporaneous knowledge of the use of "enhanced interrogation techniques" on captured terrorism suspects during an earlier stint as a top spy agency official, according to multiple sources familiar with official records.

Surprise downturn in the US economy

The economy unexpectedly contracted in the fourth quarter, but analysts said there was no reason for panic given that consumer spending and business investment picked up.

Gross domestic product fell at a 0.1 percent annual rate, its weakest performance since it emerged from recession in 2009, the Commerce Department said on Wednesday.

If it were not for the hit from slower inventory growth and the deepest plunge in defense spending in 40 years, the economy would have grown at a respectable 2.5 percent rate.

"Obviously, the headline number is a bit jarring, but the underlying details of the report, by and large, are consistent with an economy that is growing probably at a trend basis of about 2 percent," Michael Hanson, a senior economist at Bank of America Merrill Lynch in New York.

Economists polled by Reuters had expected GDP to rise at a 1.1 percent rate, and none had predicted a contraction.

Inventory drag

The economy was slammed by Superstorm Sandy in late October, which caused extensive damage along the East Coast. The Commerce Department estimated the damage from the storm was about $44.4 billion. Economists said that could have cut around half of a percentage point off fourth-quarter growth.

The recovery also had to deal with uncertainty over the so-called fiscal cliff of scheduled tax hikes and budget cuts, which hurt confidence even though households and businesses seemed to largely shrug off the worries.

RIM changes name, launches new phones

Research In Motion Ltd. unveiled the long-delayed line of smartphones it hopes will put it on the comeback trail yesterday but it disappointed investors by saying U.S. sales of its all-new BlackBerry 10 will start only in March.

Chief Executive Thorsten Heins also announced that RIM was abandoning the name it has used since its inception in 1985 to take the name of its signature prod-

RIM, which is already starting to call itself BlackBerry, had initially planned to launch the new BlackBerry 10 smartphones in 2011. But it pushed the date back twice as it struggled to work with a new operating system. Ahead of yesterday's announcements, analysts had said that any launch after February would be a black mark for the Canadian company. "The biggest disappointment was the delay in the U.S., that it will take so long before the devices get going there," said Eric Jackson, founder and managing Partner at Ironfire Capital LLC.

Heins said the delays reflected the need for U.S. carrier testing, although AT&T offered few clues on what that meant. "We are very enthusiastic about the devices. Interview

Is your cat a mass murderer?

Little Tiddles is fluffy, adorable ... and murderous. A shocking report from the Smithsonian Conservation Biology Institute found that cats kill far more animals than was previously believed — a potentially genocidal four billion birds and 20 billion mammals a year in the U.S. alone. We spoke to lead researcher Dr. Scott Lost.

Which cats are the biggest killers and why?

We estimate that un-owned cats including barn cats, stray cats, cats in subsidized colonies and cats that are completely feral are responsible for 69% of bird mortality and 89% of mammal mortality. The predation rates by this group average three times greater than rates for owned cats.

How many kills might a pet cat make in a year?

The best available data suggests that a single owned cat kills between 4 and 18 birds and between 11 and 30 mammals per year. This is before accounting for prey items that cat owners and researchers are unable to detect, so the numbers are probably higher. Un-owned cats — because they spend their time outdoors — kill far more animals: 23-46 birds and 140-330 mammals per year, on average.

But we know cats are predators. Why worry?

In the United States there are no native predators that are comparable to domestic cats; thus, cats represent a novel predator and threat to wildlife. The data suggests that native bird and mammal species — as opposed to 'pests' — make up the majority of the species preyed upon by cats. More research is needed to determine which species are most vulnerable to cats, but these should be a wildlife management priority.

What steps could/should be taken to reduce the killing?

We hope that the large amount of wildlife mortality indicated by our research alerts policymakers, wildlife managers and scientists to the large magnitude of this problem. KIERON MONKS/MWN

Tahrir bodyguards fighting Egypt's sexual attackers

Two years on from Egypt's triumphant revolution, protests have returned to Cairo's Tahrir Square — and with them a plague of sexual assaults rising to a peak of 25 reported on Jan. 25. Now Egyptian women are fighting back through civil society groups determined to provide the protection that police have failed to deliver.

"We want to create safe space for women to protest," Salma, a founding member the group Tahrir Bodyguard, told Metro. "We have volunteers to patrol the square at the Friday demonstrations and if they see an attack they intervene and take the girl to safety."

The uniformed volunteers try to avoid confrontation, says Salma, but wear protective clothing and "accept that they will face violence." Volunteers have been beaten and stabbed in their efforts to disrupt attacks.

Tahrir Bodyguard was established spontaneously in December by a small group of female friends in response to the growing number of women refusing to attend protests for fear of sexual assault. They established a Twitter account for people to report assaults and were flooded with messages of support.

The group quickly expanded to 300 active volunteers, in alliance with similar groups such as Basma and Operation Anti-Sexual Harassment, and there are signs that such actions are having an impact — despite around 80% of Egyptians believing that assaults are the victim's fault, according to a recent survey. The group plans to launch courses in self-defense.

"It is making a difference because they refer cases to us for psychological and medical help," said Dr Farah Shash, lead researcher into violence against women at Cairo's El-Nadeem Center.

Dr. Shash believes the government is resisting any progress. "We see a pattern to assaults and we know that it is organized. The assaults are systematic, on the same streets, with the same people. We can't say who exactly is behind them, but by refusing to take action the Ministry of Interior is implicitly supporting them." The Ministry could not be reached for comment.

Krakowski talks '30 Rock' series finale

► Star promises the sitcom will go out in true 'wacky style' ► What she's taking from the set

When we met up with Jane Krakowski at a Bank of America event over the holidays, the star — who plays the excitable Jenna Maroney on "30 Rock" — had just four days of filming left on the NBC sitcom. She filled us in on those final days on set, and what we can expect from tonight's series finale.

► Her final table read wasn't easy: "It was tearful. Everyone was a little choked up because we actually acknowledge the show within the show ending, so it kind of brought it all home for us. We'd kind of been living like, 'Yeah, I guess it's gonna end in a few episodes,' and suddenly we're here. But I think the writers did a great job finishing the characters the way you want them to, and, of course, in true '30 Rock' wacky style."

► Could her character get any wackier? [Laughs] "I don't know if that's even possible, but I am going to miss playing her. I mean, she's so over-the-top and high above the line of reality. Every scene we do now, I realize I'm never going to get to play this kind of out-there stuff again. I'm gonna miss it."

► Why ending the show is so bittersweet: "I think it's a mixed bag of emotions. I'm excited to see what's next. I'm going to miss everybody terribly. It's just been such a great group of people, and I think that everyone on the show knows that this is as good as it gets. I think we're all really proud of what we made and that we've made it on the air this long — it's a lot longer than we expected."

► What she's taking from the set: "It's funny, because of course you want to have some memento of the seven years — but I like to say stealing

The series finale of "30 Rock" airs tonight at 8 on NBC.

On saying goodbye:

"It's going to be hard. There's about 300 people who work on our show, and so to say goodbye to each and every one of them — there will be days when you're walking on set and pass someone and you get really emotional. You think, 'Oh, I didn't realize, I'm gonna miss that guy' — those people that you see every single day."

is a crime and I will not be partaking in any of that. There are numerous Jenna posters I could take, but I don't really need those in my home — large pictures of myself. I think Tina's taking the sign that says 'The Girlie Show' before it was named 'TGS' that Jenna destroyed by throwing something at, so it's kind of broken and she's taking it as it is. I don't know; I'll certainly take away all my good memories."

► Why Ice-T is popping up in the finale: "There is a 'Law & Order' reference. I think he plays his 'Law & Order' character. Coco was there — I think Coco's always with him. They're a sweet couple. Everyone on the set was very excited that Coco came, too."

On 'Do No Harm,' a doctor battles his double personality: A psychopath who takes over his body every night

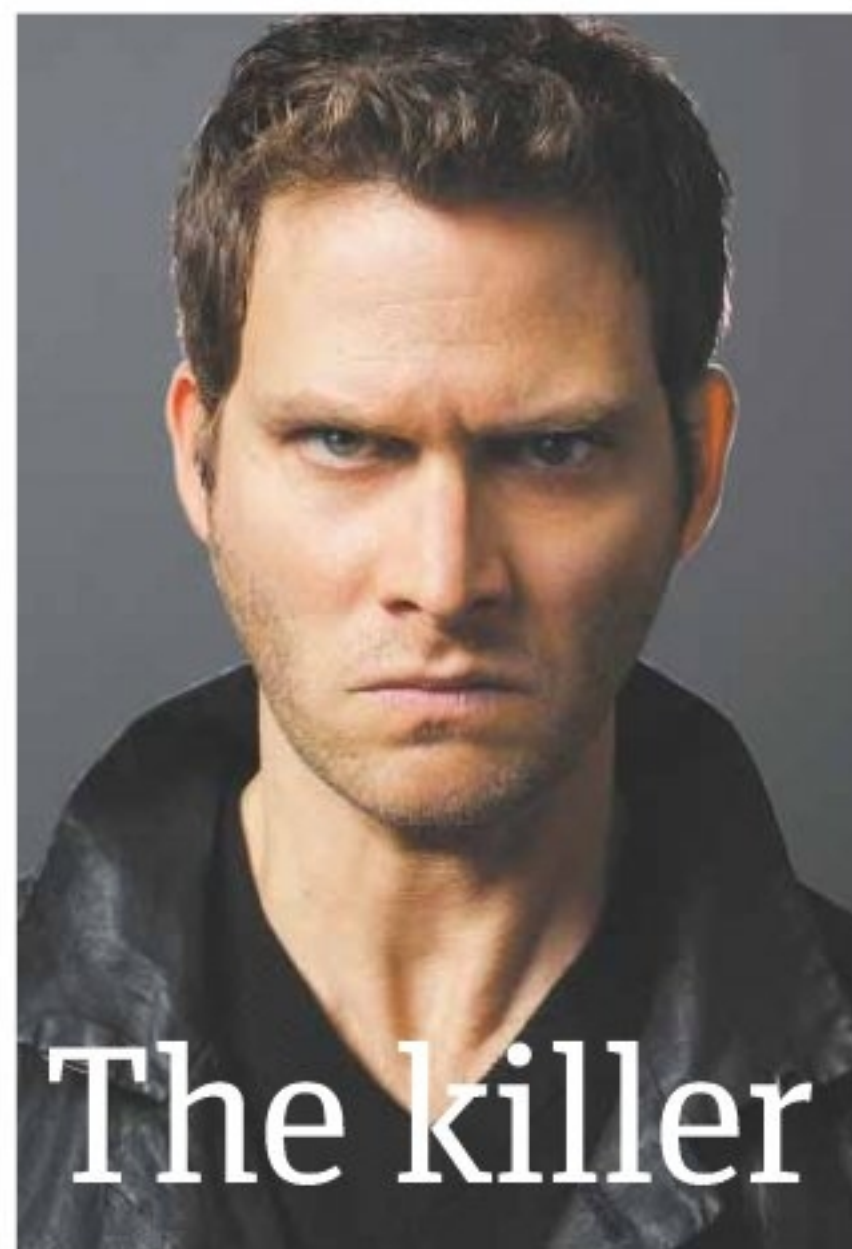

There's a new high-concept split-personality thriller on the block: NBC's "Do No Harm," starring Steven Pasquale as the successful neurosurgeon Jason and the destructive psychopath Ian, who takes over Jason's body between 8:25 p.m. and 8:25 a.m. Of course, it's not the first show in recent memory to try out the double life concept, including NBC's "My Own Worst Enemy" in 2008 and "Awake" last year, neither of which made it out to a second season.

But the folks behind "Do No Harm" are heading into tonight's premiere (10 p.m., NBC) with confidence. "I think that ultimately you can only write the show you want to watch, and this was a show that I wanted to see on TV," says executive producer David Schulner. "But definitely I took lessons from those shows, and I said this is going to be a show you're going to want to watch every single week. The stuff that Ian does to Jason and Jason will do to Ian, it's a wild roller-coaster ride, and it's just thrilling and fun. That's the big difference between those shows."

That thrilling fun comes mostly from the ways in which Ian goes wild with Jason's life while his more mild-mannered counterpart sleeps. "Ian's a little bit like a cat. The cat wants to play with that mouse. He doesn't want to kill it, because what fun would that be?" Schulner says. "So Ian's going to do a lot of stuff to Jason. And then what's great about Jason is he's just as smart as Ian is and is sometimes two steps ahead, so there are traps in place."

It's more than just a game, however, when Ian

takes over. "There's a true danger to him," Schulner says. "He's truly menacing, and that's why Jason needs to get rid of him."

For Pasquale, that makes for a fascinating acting challenge. But at least he knows both characters' fates are safe. "Ian's aware that if he were ever to murder somebody, they would [both] go to jail," Pasquale says, while stressing: "It really is a very real threat of something going very dark. Whether or not it happens will remain to be seen, but certainly that's where all of the tension lies."

Shrink Wrap

LETTERS@METRO.US

From the outside, Ryan Gosling probably seems like a flawless boyfriend — there's certainly no denying that he's a handsome star. But maintaining a relationship, as he and Eva Mendes have done for well over a year, requires so much more than that. We all want the ideal relationship with the best partner, right? In our minds that person is very clear: always thoughtful and tuned in to our needs. So when you are dating someone and he or she doesn't act like that, do you immediately assume that person isn't right for you? Or might he or she be worth a little more time and effort? More importantly, how can you make the distinction?

When it comes to your partner, many people's notion is: "If you loved me, you would ..." If you loved me, you would be willing to spend Saturday with my parents. If you loved me, you would agree to eat vegetarian. If you loved me, you would shave every day because I ask you to. In fact, it sums up so much about our expectations that "If You Loved Me You Would" is a whole chapter in my book "What About Me?" The problem is, when your partner doesn't do these things, it seems like he or she is being selfish and purposefully disappointing you. That is not always the case at all. In fact, often your partner's choices are more about his or her own preferences and not a measure of their love for you. It is the act of placing your judgment on those actions that puts the negative spin on them.

We all come at things from a varied perspective, and much of that has to do with the families we grew up in. It might seem perfectly natural to spend every Saturday with your parents, but he is used to seeing his own parents twice a year. Or, you might want to stop eating meat for one reason or another, but she loves meat — and that has nothing to do with how she feels about you.

"When it comes to your partner, many people's notion is: 'If you loved me you would ...' The problem is, when your partner doesn't do these things it seems like they are being selfish and purposefully disappointing you. That is not always the case at all." GREER

It's usually a bumpy road

Disrespectful behavior that makes you feel devalued requires other considerations. But if it is just a matter of dealing with your differences, despite the few bumps they might generate, it doesn't have to mean the end of the journey. The goal is not to eradicate the disappointments, but to learn how to handle them, work through them and move on. No partner is perfect, probably not even Ryan, so you want to be equipped to face the let-downs without letting the whole thing fall apart.

— Relationship expert Dr. Jane Greer is the creator of "Shrink Wrap" — national commentary on what we can learn from celebrity relationships — and host of "Let's Talk Sex" at HealthyLife.net. Her book, "What About Me? Stop Selfishness From Ruining Your Relationship," is available nationwide.

Dating in brief

Preparing your insides
for a date

Dr. Dawn Harper — health expert on the British TV show "Embarrassing Bodies" — talks us through

Eat daintily on a date.

what we should or shouldn't eat and drink before and during a hot date.

► Take a probiotic

If you know that you suffer from gas, taking a probiotic (as a supplement or in your yogurt or cereal) will help with your digestion.

► Beat the bloat

Constipation causes bloating. If you have a tendency that way, increase the fiber in your diet by eating more fruit and vegetables two to three days before the date.

► Fill up on H2O

Drink plenty of fluids throughout date day. A dehydrated mouth is a smelly one.

► Don't drink on an empty stomach

But if you're going for dinner, you can't afford to be too full either. Have something small, like a cookie and a glass of milk to line your stomach.

During the date:

► Avoid gassy foods

Our body produces around 2 liters of bowel gas a day ... but you don't want to be breaking wind when you're trying to have a romantic evening. Foods such as beans, onions, cabbage, sprouts and artichokes increase production of gas. Remove these foods from your diet for a while.

► Skip the spaghetti

Don't order a pasta-based dish. We've yet to meet somebody who could eat spaghetti easily. Choose something you know you can eat relatively elegantly.

► Watch your mouth

Spicy or garlicky foods can cause bad breath. Be conscious of what your other half is eating and follow suit. Tip: If your dish comes with a parsley garnish, chew on that as it will help get rid of any nasty smells in your mouth.

► Skip the espresso

End the meal with a peppermint tea. This will freshen your breath and help ease digestion.

Horoscope

♊ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Even if the behavior of someone you like proves to be frustrating, you'll have the good judgment to cope with it philosophically — without damaging the relationship.

♋ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Although you'll have the ability to size up situations accurately, there's a chance that you will do something that won't serve your best interest. Use your common sense.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. Even if you are luckier than usual in certain material matters, remember: Your good fortune has its limit.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Your chances for achieving an important objective look good, provided you play it cool. If you're too visible, competitors might shoot you down.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. A social event that you aren't eager to join could turn out to be enjoyable. The problem won't be with the affair — it's likely to be with you.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Success is likely in a joint endeavor if you handle things correctly. The problem will come from the distribution of rewards; be sure everyone involved is treated properly.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Reason rather than force must be used in all testy developments with which you might have to contend. Make certain your logic wins out over your impulses.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. It's important that you have a voice in all matters that could cost you out of pocket. This is one area where others should not be allowed to make decisions for you.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Think of yourself as part of a team in all of your involvements with friends, and strive to be cooperative.

If you are self-serving, you'll stick out like a sore thumb.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Provided you don't go off on tangents, you will be extremely adept at fulfilling your ambitious objectives. Waste your energies on side issues, however, and you won't reach your goals.

Second Amendment protects right to bear arms

Yes, the Second Amendment applies to armies and militias for the purpose of defending against invasion and insurrection. However, it also allows individuals to protect themselves against thugs and tyrannical governments. There is no record of the founders viewing a "well regulated Militia" as only state militias, but rather the sum of individuals in a state who choose to create a militia. "The right of the people" in the Constitution is always in reference to individuals, not to some state entity.

Oscar-worthy performance by GOP

And the Oscar for best performance by a political party "pretending" to work in the best interests of the people of the United States goes to ... once again ... the GOP!!!! Accepting on the behalf of the GOP are the three stooges — John Boehner, Mitch

McConnell and Eric Cantor. ROBERT LA ROSA, VIA EMAIL

Gun advocates undermine views

RE: GIVE ME LIBERTY, NOT MORE GOVERNMENT (METRO, JAN. 29) It's looking like the First Amendment might not be so kind to Second Amendment fanatics like John E. Bevan. The more opportunity people like Mr. Bevan take to express themselves freely about guns and their bizarre conception of liberty, the more they undermine the image of the sane, responsible gun owner that groups like the NRA are trying to promulgate. For Mr. Bevan, and many like him, it is CLEARLY the case that the government is out of control and that they are armed and ready to fight this tyranny that exists strictly in their imaginations. But for the rest of us, their childish comic book fantasy of armed insurrection against Obama's storm troopers smacks of delusional paranoia and dances close to the line of treason and sedition. And of course, he concludes with the "cold, dead hands" threat. The cold, dead hands, my friend, belong to a classroom full of innocent first-graders. ROBERT TROMBETTA, VIA EMAIL

Getting ready to meet newest Wing Bowl star

► O'Brien goes from operating table to center stage ► Surgeon creates the Ultimate Wingette

Angelo Cataldi and the brain trust behind Wing Bowl are constantly trying to push the envelope. This time, they have pushed it off the operating table.

Morgan O'Brien, 27, of Churchville, has long considered herself an attractive, empowered female. But, probably not unlike the other scantily clad divas strutting the stage, O'Brien has also been keenly aware of her flaws.

Not anymore.

O'Brien, thanks to Bucks County plastic surgeon Dr. Robert Skalicky, underwent a series of procedures, including breast enhancements, nasal refinement and lip filler. Tomorrow, she will be unveiled at Wing Bowl 21 as the Ultimate Wingette.

"I always wanted to look better and feel my age again," O'Brien said. "I'm sure if you asked any female, they would tell you that they have thought about plastic surgery. Now I feel more self-confident."

O'Brien went under the knife Jan. 3, enduring surgery that lasted for an hour and a half.

"I'm thrilled that the things I wanted changed are changed," she said. "[Dr. Skalicky] is an artist. Excellent."

The only people that have seen her since have been her co-workers and family, including 4-year-old son Michael.

"He didn't really recognize the breast size," said O'Brien, who went from a 32A to a 32D cup size.

O'Brien isn't sure what Cataldi has planned for her tomorrow, only that she will be paraded out in front of the masses.

► Sixer ownership is trying to bring Iverson back to Philly with a job in the organization.

Iverson turns down offer in D-league, set to join Sixers?

Sixers owner Josh Harris and CEO Adam Aron have never been shy about reaching out to icons.

Last May, Julius Erving returned to the fold as a strategic adviser. Now the duo is trying to lure Allen Iverson back.

Iverson, who reportedly turned down an offer to play for the Mavericks' D-league team, was in town yesterday to meet with Harris and Aron about a possible position with the Sixers. Nothing has been announced yet.

"I want to ensure that Josh Harris and Adam Aron know how much Allen appreciates what Philadelphia has meant to him, what the NBA has meant to him, and to someday come back and be a consultant to them, to help them do certain things," said Gary Moore, Iverson's manager, in an interview with The Associated Press.

Moore denied a previous report claiming that the 37-year-old Iverson is broke. Iverson has repeatedly said that he wishes to return to the NBA, but no teams have come calling. Iverson lamented his early departure from the Association yesterday in a series of tweets.

"I realize my actions contributed to my early departure from the NBA," Iverson wrote. "Should God provide me another opportunity, I will give it my all." ● METRO

Fantasy Sports

ADAM

ALEVITAN@METRO.US

OFF THE SHELF

Fantasy seasons crippled by injuries aren't limited to football. Our hoops campaigns can be decimated as well.

Top hoops adds

1 Eric Bledsoe, PG, Clippers — Chris Paul's knee injury appears more serious than the team has let on. Bledsoe is flashing starting-caliber talent.

2 Avery Bradley, SG, Celtics — Rajon Rondo's absence opens up a massive hole in the backcourt.

Owners of Kevin Love and Rajon Rondo already know this. But due to the length of an NBA season, there's a flip side here. Some players can come back and help us in a big way — as Andrew Bogut is proving:

Saving Sixers

Andrew Bynum (knee) has ditched strip clubs and bowling alleys for on-court work. He's expected to make his long-awaited debut shortly after the All-Star break. Although he'll be on plenty of restrictions, Bynum will immediately step in as the East's best center, will be counted on as the Sixers' savior and is in a contract year.

► Andrew Bynum's hotly anticipated return is finally on the horizon.

On the Grange

Danny Granger's knee injury cost him most of the season and his role as the Pacers' go-to guy. Still, he's one of the league's premier 3-point shooters and will still give defensive stats. Expect Granger back on the floor in some capacity by early March.

Soft as Bargs

Andrea Bargnani was falling out of favor in Toronto even before he went down with an elbow injury. But he's still a former No. 1 overall pick that can help his team and fantasy teams with his shooting touch. A trade out of Toronto? Even better.
